

Preview

President Adams's Foreign Policy Dilemma

What should President Adams do to protect U.S. ships?

- Option A: Declare war on France immediately.
- Option B: Form a military alliance with Great Britain and declare war on France together.
- Option C: Do not go to war but try to negotiate with France.
- Option D: End all overseas shipping.

President Jefferson's Foreign Policy Dilemma

How should President Jefferson deal with piracy in the Mediterranean Sea?

- Option A: Pay the increased tribute to the Tripoli ruler and avoid war.
- Option B: Send a peace envoy to Tripoli to negotiate.
- Option C: Send warships to the Mediterranean Sea to protect U.S. shipping interests.
- Option D: End all U.S. shipping in the Mediterranean Sea.

President Madison's Foreign Policy Dilemma

What should President Madison do to protect sailors and settlers?

- Option A: Declare war on Great Britain and attack the British on land and sea.
- Option B: Declare war on Great Britain but wage a war only at sea.
- Option C: Delay declaring war on Great Britain until the United States is better prepared.
- Option D: Do not declare war on Great Britain.

President Monroe's Foreign Policy Dilemma

Should President Monroe support the new Latin American nations and, if so, how?

- Option A: Do not support the new Latin American nations.
- Option B: Create an alliance with Great Britain to support Latin American independence.
- Option C: Create an alliance with the Latin American nations to defend their independence against European interference.
- Option D: Warn Europe to stay out of Latin America.